This Week is a Nightmare

Burnt to a Crisp

Whether you have four projects due tomorrow, three exams in the last five days that were all just scheduled last week, an immediate need to secure housing for next year, or multiple if not all of the previously mentioned, this week is a shitshow. It's been an absolute nightmare for many if not most of tech students (and professors).

For those who aren't aware, this is due to the scheduling of Spring Break right after week 7, making it more difficult than ever for professors to not schedule all of their exams and project deadlines during week 6/7 — it's the only time they have between Winter Carni and Spring Break. As a result of this, it has become more difficult than ever for students to have time to sleep at night without sacrificing their grades and/or other commitments.

Speaking of which, I don't have time to finish this article. . If you're looking for a bit of stress relief, feel free to rip this article to shreds. I will definitely be tearing up a copy myself. I'll even include some lines as a guide.
