DOMINOS INCIDENT

Dominos Employees Weather Onslaught

Pizza Survivor

After Michigan Tech Hockey's dominant 5-0 triumph over Bowling Green last Friday, Dominos in Houghton offered a 50% off pizza deal, 10% for each goal scored, to anyone who brought in a ticket or their MTU ID. What followed was a marinara melee of unfathomable proportions, as Dominos was flooded with a ravenous horde of college students just trying to get a reasonably priced pizza for once. The scene wasn't for the faint of heart- crowds of at least 5 people gathered inside the store waiting for their pizza which the digital tracking system insisted was only going to take 1-5 minutes despite it actually taking 3-5 hours. If it were before the days of digital ordering, people would have seen a massive swarm of hungry patrons and reconsidered if they really felt like waiting an eon for a large pizza with some pineapple and chickie. However, we live in the Future™, so the only way to know how bad it really was was to physically go into the store and ask the beleaguered employees what the status of your order was, only for them to have to dig in the system for it and tell you you're at the bottom of the queue still, and that the automated order tracker is like one door guardian in a paradox, for it only lies.

Throughout this debacle, the workers at Dominos summoned every ounce of vigor within their souls in order to keep up. "It's a bloodbath" one worker said as he juggled four hand-tossed pizza crusts simultaneously, before sliding them to the next station to be coated with the sauce. "This is the worst it's been in the two years I've worked here". "We've had a 3 hour wait time for the last 5 hours" another mentioned to a customer who was just hoping to get a little bite to eat. Dominos delivery drivers were spotted at 1:30 in the morning still bringing pizza to college students who probably expected them never to actually arrive and were in the midst of breaking into their emergency survival ramen rations. Nevertheless, on their endless crusade against late night munchies, Dominos employees valiantly continued the fight, cutting through hordes of pizza crusts despite overwhelming odds.

So next time you see your friendly neighborhood Dominos employee, be sure to thank them for their service and let them know that their struggle is both recognized and appreciated. Their monumental efforts holding the line during the onslaught of March 9th will surely go down in history as one of the greatest acts of heroism in the 21st century.
