Winter Left to Go Get Milk

DJ Benjamin

Man, crazy weather we're having, ain't it? What, we don't even get a white Christmas, it barely snows until after New Years, it's in the single-digits and just absolutely dumping snow for a weekend, and then now it's threatening to go back above freezing again? What's the big idea? Houghton is known for being the Winteriest Wonderlandiest Last Place on Earth, and here we are, looking at the forecast, seeing highs of 275 K. That's like, comfortably above freezing. And it's supposed to be getting to 280 K a little over a week from now (that's 45°F for us freedom-loving, burger munching, dog-walking, rootin-shootin ra-ra-rasputin Americans).

This winter of 2023-2024 really feels like a deadbeat season. It didn't even show up for the holidays, it was late in general, and when it did show up it tried to over-compensate with a massive snow storm that caused disruptions and canceled MLK Day weekend plans, as if that was going to make everything alright. And now it's just going to bugger off again, maybe to come back later, maybe not, who knows? We sure don't. How are we supposed to play broomball when the courts are melting underneath our feet? How are we supposed to be the snowiest campus in the contiguous US when the snow keeps melting away? How are we supposed to enjoy winter when it's barely even been here?

The experts are saying it's "El Niño", or "Climate Change". Some are even saying it's "the EERC is still running its heat on full blast and I'm in a t-shirt sweating like a dog like for goodness sake just turn down the heat a little bit the EERC is a massive concrete and brick box with no windows we're literally baking in here please God". I say it's the 23-24 winter being a deadbeat and a poor excuse for a season. As an avid enjoyer of Winter Carnival, Broomball, and Winter as a whole, I say that we, as residents of Houghton and broadly the UP as a whole, cannot stand for this poor weather performance on behalf of this winter. We deserve proper cold winter weather, the kind where you can go outside and ski, then come back and watch some broomball, before wrapping up in a nice warm blanket with a cup of cocoa and watch the snow fall outside, without having to worry about it covering every road in the county with ice from it melting and freezing overnight. And somehow, the idea that even the lows are high enough that the snow won't refreeze isn't comforting.

Above: scientifically accurate model on how it feels to experience 30 degree weather in January
