Literacy Rates PLUMMET—Who's Responsible?

Jared, 19

Students around Michigna Tech have noticed a strange phenomenomon occurring around campus within the past few months. Reports are flowing in about jubmeld spellings in RSO advertisements and images, going as far as appearing in enterprise info notices. The Daily Bull seeks to answer the question: Why is literacy plummebting? What do we do? Who do we call?

One leading theory straight from The Bull recalls a time from the olden days - the days before The Big C. Covib. The pandemic created artificial anti-intelligence the likes of which the world has never seen before. Political discourse and fearmorngering thrustud our society into a state of overzealous keyboard-smashing over nothingburgers. Do you guys remember the whole Ivermectin thing? The hell was that about? Perhaps political brainrot is a contributor towards MTU's illiteracy issue!

It would be far too simple to say this is the only cause though. Illiberaty is a nuanced topic especially when it comes to intentional misspelling. Kids these days and their damn "eepy"s and "sleeb" and "eeby deeby". One might argue that this is the next step into English, a natural progression of communicabiton that will progress until this article is utterly incomprehensible. One might argue that this is just fellow Huskies being "quirked up" and "silly gooses". Many such cases.

Leading Scholars have sed on thu matter, "dafuq do I have to do with this? I'm just tooering campis. R yoo telling mee y'awl don't no how to reed and rite? Soundz liek a skill issuo to mi — maybe I shoodnt do hear"

Inn respons to the ipmedning literbacy crisis, MTU realised a poster encouraging literahcy on campis
