IT'S BEEN 1 DAYS SINCE THE LAST E1 FIRE ALARM

MTU's Newest Coffee Shop

DJ Benjamin

In a flagrant circumventing of MTU Dining Services' authority related to on-campus food services, local entrepreneur and jetpack enthusiast, Robert Newman Vigene, has announced that his newest business venture will be on MTU's campus. However, after Dining Services denied his offer to take over the library café space from Velodrome coffee, he has announced that his store is taking advantage of an obscure loophole in MTU policy and Michigan state law. While establishing an unauthorized store on any location MTU campus is strictly off limits, Vigene claims his scheme gets around that rule.

What is this scheme, you may ask? The entire store is designed to be run out of a slow moving hovercraft, doing circles around the Husky Statue just outside of MTU's library, putting him in prime location to compete with Velodrome's Ann Arbor-priced coffee that somehow is sold in Houghton. According to Vigene, once the hovercraft is constantly moving, it doesn't qualify as a "location", and since it's always going to be hovering just a few inches above the ground, it's not technically "on" MTU's campus either, but rather above it. Since planes flying overhead can sell items to their passengers without being in MTU's jurisdiction, Vigene argues that his moving shop also qualifies.

Along with the novelty of a shop floating around campus, Bob's Air Shop will also provide a wide array of ethically-sourced signature coffee and tea blends. Coffee blends brewed-to-order will include: the Blue Bovine Blend (no affiliation to either "Blue Bell" ice cream or Max Verstappen), with distilled caffeine added to up the caffeine content of a single serving to that of a Jolt Cola; the Blazing Saddle, a mix of light and dark roasts; and the "I don't care just give me a coffee", which is a mystery flavor allegedly made up of the combined waste scraps of other perfectly good beans that didn't get used to make a properly-flavored roast. But the Air Shop will also vend lattes and espresso drinks, including The MuchoMachoMacchiatito, which comes in a tiny concealable camouflage cup; the Patriot, which is an Americano delivered via a t-shirt cannon-esque system; and Newman's Nectar, which is also a salted caramel Darjeeling chai latte topped with allspice, cinnamon, and nutmeg.

While MTU is investigating ways to shut down Bob N. Vigene's Air Shop, it presently appears they have no legal avenue to do so. Thus, Vigene is making final preparations to bring his hovercraft to MTU's campus just in time for the first snow, so that students can brave the icy winds and blinding snowfall to drop by the hovercraft and drink some Newman's Nectar. The viability of this enterprise remains to be seen, especially considering whether the shop can offer competitive prices compared to the Velodrome while having to pay for the operating costs of a hovercraft. It is also unlikely the shop will accept Dining Dollars, but Vigene has also alluded to another scheme for exchanging Dining Dollars for the lucrative "Hukee Buks" cryptocurrency, which will be accepted, along with cash, card, Venmo, Apple Wallet, WeChat, and sand dollars.
