Celebrity Demolition Derby!

By Liz Fujita ~ Daily Bull

Come one, come all, to the third annual Special Vehicles Demolition Derby! The event will be held this weekend in the sunshine of Labor Day weekend at McClain State Park. Admission is $15 for adults, $9 for children under the age of 12, and free for infants whose parents are willing to scar them for life.

The Derby will be split into many competitive categories. First will be Standard Small Vehicles: entrants include Scooby and Shaggy with their Mystery Mobile, the car from Vanishing Point, Ron Weasley with his flying Ford Anglia, and the killer Gaga-Beyonce duo in their take on the Pussy Wagon.

Gaga and Knowles are heavily favored, though a close second is the meddling kid with his dog. For obvious technical reasons, Weasley has been banned from us...see DAS EERC on back

Hostage Situation at Disney Channel

By Sam Schall ~ Daily Bull

At 8:00 am yesterday, in Burbank California, the headquarters of Disney channel was put into lockdown when local and state police were posted at all exits to the building. By 7:00 pm that, everything had been handled, those responsible dealt with, and reporters were finally given some information.

It was reported that two women marched into the front door of the Disney Channel headquarters and forced the guards to lock the doors. The two women were Lindsay Lohan and Hilary Duff. Both were carrying large bags of a questionable fashion and yelling about demands. When questioned about any drugs in their systems and their personal sanities, Lindsey and Hilary promptly each pulled out a hand gun.

The building was officially in lockdown and the police arrived to handle the lockdown-quickly-turned-hostage situation. They called into the building where they found out the two young stars' demands.

The two wanted their talent back, claiming it to have been stolen by Miley Cyrus, Selena Gomez and Demi Lovato. Lindsey and Hilary obviously were too drugged or drunk or a combination of both to remember that they had no talent in the first place, let alone did any of the other actresses mentioned in their demands. Actually, the only talent that had ever walked through the doors of Disney channel had belonged to Walt Disney himself, who should be turning in his grave right about now because of the bad talent broadcasted in his name.

They just wanna be a girl, do what a girl does, and drink themselves silly. Disney does that to girls...

It took later that evening for the police

Michigan Tech Follows Trend: More Obvious Signs Posted

By Jon "Big O" Mahan ~ Daily Bull

Following their posting of signs at Michigan Tech crosswalks saying "Only cross when traffic is clear", MTU has begun placing similar signs all over campus, directing people to other common sense actions. At the bottom of Wadsworth Hill reads a sign that says "Only walk up hill if attempting to reach higher elevation".

This is not all. They're everywhere. Just a few that I've seen include "only eat in the dining hall if hungry, or if you just want to eat food.", "Enter building only when door is open" and it's partner sign "Only open door if it is closed.", and my personal favorite "Flush toilet to send waste on to new places". I love how they worded that one. It's got me thinking. Where else might they have put signs? This quickly became an undercover ...see wet when wet on back ing the flight feature of his car. A Gaga representative told the Daily Bull, "We've been marketing this pretty heavily. The ladies will be wearing helmets made entirely of lobster shells, and jumpsuits fashioned from burlap sacks and zebra pelt."

The competition will almost certainly rah-rah-rock.

In the Big and Tall heat, a FedEx triple freighter will square off against the crowd favorite - a local garbage truck. Other worthy opponents to watch for are a two-floor mobile home and a school bus from Detroit. Authorities have ensured the emptiness of the school bus to cut down on foul play.

Despite not being a vehicle, the Will it Blend? blendtec Blender is by far the favorite and most feared competitor in the derby. Its only weakness? It has none...

Provided Lake Superior cooperates on Sunday, the derby will introduce a new category for Wet and Wild vehicles.

Although freighters over a certain size are disqualified (they can't move fast enough for the event to be worthwhile), many other nautical personalities will be there. Jack Sparrow hopes that flipping his boat upside-down is a relevant strategy against a bloodthirsty SS Anne. T-Pain is reported to be the celebrity for the boat round.

report, with me carefully finding and cataloging every amazing sign I could.

It amazed me to what ends the lawyers and Tech went, making sure nobody could sue them or get hurt. On doors you can see "Warning: When slammed in face, may be painful", "Open when door is not closed" and "People have used this before".

It's amazing what they've done with those signs. Everywhere and all over the place, they're pasted. I walked through the girls floor dorms in Wadsworth hall, and before entering it read. "Warning: Girls are here, if you are a CS major, do not make eye contact.". I found it interesting when I went to walk outside there was another sign. "Warning: Sunlight burns. CS majors advised to use tunnels." Holy crap! We have tunnels!? Oh yeah they build them last year.

Despite all these obvious signs for people to, or not to, do certain things, it never stops people. Im not sure what's a worse sign, the fact that tech has to make signs for things like "If trying to get to class, moving is a good idea" or if, somehow, someone here always manages to find a way to still disobey it and require another sign. Whatever you do, first-years, do not challenge the logging trucks. Unless you like pancakes. A lot. ☹ to get into the building and search it - only to discover that it was empty because nobody wants to work for a has-been corporation. When the police and SWAT team found Lindsay and Hilary, they had found the cafeteria's bar and proceeded to drink until they passed out, proving once again how much idiots they are and that their intelligence dried up long ago.

The bags they were reported to have been seen with were simply their overly large purses with tiny dogs in them and the handguns were actually toys bought from the Wal-Mart down the street. When questioned why they had tried to hold up Disney, they answered by throwing up in the faces of their lawyers, passing out once again.

The two celebrities will be prosecuted, Chief of Police said, and their sentence will most likely end up being probation time and volunteer work for the next two weeks. With any luck for humanity, it will all be on an isolated island where we will all proceed to forget about them again. ☹

Last year's winner, an armored banking van, will not be returning due to their sponsor, Wauchovia, being bought by Wells Fargo. The latter, having no sense of humor or fun, opted out of the competition.

A much anticipated round will be Hyperpowered and Hyper-Terrestrial. Optimus Prime, in semi truck form, may lose his cool against Batman's Batmobile. "Bruce has been sending taunts to Optimus all week via Twitter," said a spokesbat. Of more concern to the two, however, is Obi-Wan Kenobi's X-wing, which survived more crash landings than any other Derby entrant.

More contestants to watch for: the car from Chitty Chitty Bang Bang, James Bond in a yet-unrevealed car, and the Pope Mobile.

Patrons are encouraged to bring riot shields to protect themselves from debris, especially from the Hyper-rounds. Plenty of seating will be made available by the erection of a World Cup stadium near Lake Superior. The Demolition Derby will begin around 2:00 on Sunday, barring tardiness from participants (Kenobi anticipates a great deal of intergalactic traffic from his supporters) or likely forfeits by competitors (Ron looked unsteady at last glance).

There will be far more participants than those listed above; feel free to begin placing bets and choosing a vehicle to cheer for.

For those wondering, yes there will be food provided for people of all races, universes, and dietary needs. ☹
