The Evil Elevator?

By Samantha Schall

- Daily Bull ~

The trailers for Devil by, guess who, M. Night Shyamalan, have been popping up throughout the mass media. As he tries to ride the wave of success from Avatar: The Last Airbender, we see the real story that takes place....

In Devil, the evil elevator is actually the Wadsworth middle elevator: It's so slow, you'll graduate with a husband and three kids before you get to the fifth floor. The evil sucks your life away. The soul it takes is then stored in the building to power the elevator and force it to go slower and slower. Over time it will never move and trap those poor souls inside it forever and mercilessly suck their souls away.

The Wads elevator also has that lovely sense of humor, where it goes to the fourth floor and then, instead of continuing to the fifth floor, USG 2010-9-8...

By John "7654321" Pastore ~ Daily Bull

Welcome, illustrious student body, to your Guardians of Order, the Congress of Control, the Surveyors of All Formalities of the Student Activities Fee, and in short the bastards who manage the funds for all the Student Organizations, the Undergraduate Student Government.

But wait, you of a student org may cry! What of that meeting just last week, where Student Activities told us they scrapped all of our old organization records and registrations, and introduced for the first time the "Involvement Link" registration system? Well, that's unfortunately the whole of its function - a registration system. "Student Activities" is a university department which is responsible for registering all these groups.

Desiring a new system of registration makes some sense - there being hundreds of organizations on campus for the spazziest little thing - though abandoning the previous web based registration system and all it's stored data for a new system hosted off-campus, allowing at the moment anyone to register themselves in control of any unregistered group, providing about as many announcements of a new system as there were tree was about to be removed... offering a Facebook-like interface certainly earns them 10 points for style, but minus several million for execution.

And the talk of approval by a majority of the student body? Digging into the minutes, the system was apparently approved on the 21st of October of 2009 by the USG, and not a word

... Involved with Links from front was said of it since; the only talk of "Collegiate Link" was for its use as an election system after the staggering failure of the previous election system. The USG is the only organization on campus elected by the student body, so there is some sense to a margin of control over these gibbering mobs of students, if only to impose certain forms of "fun." This, like your fat roommate, is rarely exercised.

So where does this leave the USG? Presiding over the money collected from the Student Activities Fee, of course. You can check it on your bill; this works out to a fairly large amount of money (nearly a half megadollar), and is distributed to organizations through their normal budgets, emergency allocations for when things breaks from the Reserve Fund, and the Opportunities Fund for new stuff - and this year for those organizations who didn't submit their budgets on time last year.

However, this is the start of the year. Not much has happened; Opportunities Funds money went to SAE AREO as per the above tardy-budget ruling, and the new Fast Pitch Softball Club as per their inception. A new treasurer was elected unopposed as the previous had flown the co-op, and as such there is a single second-year representative position open. The nominations for all the first-year rep is also open, till the 17th - next Friday - so if any of those positions appeal to you, the USG office in the MUB has a datapack for you.

What's to come in the year that follows? Repairs to the MUB Kiosk, known more for it's hopelessly optimistic or dismal temperature and time readings? Taking despotic control of "Rock the Vote" to ensure real working voter registration this time, for once? Finding out if there's actually any space left in the Student Organization Storage Space by the SDC? Check in next week for another exciting adventure of the Undergraduate Student Government!

... Third Floor from front

it proceeds to go back down to the first floor. You are forced to endure the slowness of the elevator twice! That's twice as much time you are forced to hold your bladder after those 5 or 6 beers you had with your buddies, or carry your heavy bag of books you foolishly brought to the class you don't even stay awake in. That precious time!

The days that the Wadsworth elevator is broken down is when it's really offering to feed the other elevators in the building while it uses its souls that it has stolen so far. The souls of those too lazy to walk up that one flight of stairs and don't wait for those on crutches who need to get to the fifth floor are most useful when it needs to contact its evil maker.

When you get stuck in the broken elevator, that, my friends, THAT is the massive torture that the middle Wadsworth elevator dishes out. It is harsh on those that are in it just by accident when the elevator shut down, forcing them to sit and wait out with limited oxygen and fighting for that last fresh breath of air after someone lets one rip. But those who jump in the elevator receive the harsher punishment. They who jump become they who pay for repairs, either in blood and sweat or in money and debt. So ye who think it be fun to jump all at once, prepare!

The evil elevator, how we love to hate you and love to use you. The elevator who is slow and plays tricks on us. The elevator who gets us back when we misuse you. May one day the campus finally decide to replace you with a good, working, reliable, non-evil elevator with a weight limit and size capacity to fit more than five and their book bags.

Now here are some words from David Hasselhoff: "Last night I was _____ (-ing verb) with my friends. All of the sudden _____ (name) gave me a _____ (verb) and I _____ (past tense verb) all over him/her. You wouldn't believe how much _____ (bodily fluid) there was all over the _____ (noun). Now, I wanted to add that this is not a common occurrence, we usually like to _____ (verb) as a group of friends." Some wisdom from Gene Simmons: "I don't know if you recall, but last time I heard, _____ (name) was having a/n _____ (event) at his/her place. They're supposed to _____ (action verb) in front of _____ (Mich Tech professor) and cause a/n _____ (noun). This can only end _____ (adverb). All we can do now is _____ (verb) each other."

Broken!? Still? Damn that thing still has my SOUL!
