Big City Observations: Crime

Brought to you by

Nathan "Invincible" Miller

Wherever you go in the world, three things are certain: the water always tastes funny, you're probably being overcharged, and people will always be breaking the law. Seems that no matter how tough (or relaxed) the rules are, people will always find a way around them. This is especially evident in cities.

Out in the hills of Pennsylvania, crime was something you always dreamed of. People really rob banks? Wow, wouldn't that be exciting! One time I read a police report in the paper about how a few bags of cement at a construction site were thrown off a bridge into a stream. Estimated losses were in the $50 range. Talk about chump change! Now that I'm in the city, you only hear about people wearing cement shoes being thrown off bridges.

Even the simulated crime up at Tech doesn't compare. In just two weeks at Albany, ...see Das Criminale on back

Mopeds

By Stephen Whittaker ~ Daily Bull

They say that having relations with an overweight woman is like riding a moped: it's fun until your friends find out.

To them I say nay, riding a moped is sheer a w e s o m e , and I have yet to experience the former.

I recently purchased a moped for a measly

$350.00 and it is possibly one of the coolest investments I've yet to make. Despite being built in 1980 the moped I have is in near mint condition and gets me where I need to go. Sure, I might need to push myself part way up Agate because the little 49cc motor may not like it, but other hills such as Quincy hill or the SDC hill have been conquered with ease.

You may be asking yourself why, why a moped? To you I say why not! Here are some great reasons you should go out right now and snap one up yourself.

Bird-ped. I wonder if this moped runs on chicken blood....

One: You look like a badass. If you're riding one of these little numbers down College Ave or around campus you notice these things: if you're a dude you be beating the ladies off with a stick, if you are a chick every dude you pass will be like "look at that babe."

Two: Great Gas Mileage. I went to fill my tank which had probably about ...see ZOOM ZOOM ZOOM on back

... ZOOM ZOOM ZOOM from front. an eighth left and I thought of this might take a gallon at least right? At a Walmart gas pump I managed to put $1.40 in premium in before she wouldn't take any more.

Three: You may not go fast but you get there with ease. Sure riding down College Ave you may have cars stacked behind you because the mopeds only go 25 to 30 mph but who cares? You look like a badass, and if you are cruising to campus you never have a problem finding a place to park.

Four: Get it and go. With a moped you don't need any special license to drive it, that is if you have a normal driver's license, and if you happen to be 18 or older then you don't need a helmet either! (Note: I'm not suggesting you do this, brain injury isn't fun) You don't even need a friggen license plate or insurance for that matter. All you need to do is register it with the Secretary of State every three years for $15 dollars!

Five: Accessorizing! Once you purchase a moped you begin to realize, what could make this even more fun? Well think about it. You can do all sorts of cool things to your moped and riding gear, baskets, bags, cup holders, extra lights, custom horns, special hats, jackets, goggles, gloves, you name it! Personalization is half the fun!

Me, I run a baby blue Honda Express, with not one but two side baskets, and if you see a guy driving down College Ave with a leather jacket and some aviators that guy would be me, wave at me and I'll honk back.

If you haven't gotten the urge to run out and buy one of these bad boys yet then I suggest you hop on one and experience the pure joy of riding one yourself. And if that doesn't convince you I don't know what will. 🍀 there were more real reports of crime than there were during my entire four years at Tech. Maybe Albany is just a tough city, or maybe it's all cities in general.

For instance, the first weekend I was here a couple of girls were beaten and mugged by... two other girls. Then a few days later a serial masturbator broke into a fourth residence and did his deed above another sleeping victim. I can't even imagine that happening in a town with a few thousand people in it, or any number of Yoopers jammed into one spot. There just isn't enough bad intent.

There are drunks rioting on city buses, druggies on every corner, and jaywalkers hiking out into traffic like they own the place. Is their no decency? I went to New York City a couple weekends ago and only saw "a few" drug busts in action. A few is more than the one I ever saw up at Tech. Maybe Tech students were just better at hiding their crimes; I mean, what kind of cop wants to dig through feet of snow to find marijuana stashes? Definitely not the ones in Houghton!

So far I haven't seen any high-speed chases on my street or gun fights in the park, but I'm sure it's inevitable. Even though a greater percentage of people owned guns in rural areas (hunting with assault rifles, anyone?), the few people with guns here always seem to cause exponentially more trouble with them. It's like the Inverse Ninja Law: the fewer gangsters with guns there are, the more likely they are to go on a rampage. Note: this doesn't apply to Mexico.

I'm not considering buying a Kevlar vest just yet, mostly because I still have to buy books for some classes. Hey, there's an idea: textbooks as body armor. I'll have to keep that in mind next time I'm walking through two screaming groups of people about to start a brawl. Which has only happened twice, by the way. 🍀

2010 HOMECOMING ALUMNI BROOMBALL TOURNAMENT

Do you like Broomball? Do you like to fill out brackets for the NCAA Basketball Tournament? Do you like to help those in need? If you answered yes to any of these: we have an answer for that, the Homecoming Bracket Challenge brought to you by the Michigan Tech Alumni Association and IRHC Broomball. All you have to do is visit www.broomball.mtu.edu and print off a bracket and bring it to the Broomball office in Wads G24 with a $1.00 registration fee. All the proceeds go to charity. Also, there will be door prizes. Just make sure you have your brackets turned in before Wednesday, September 29.
