2012 Chrysler Failtrain

By Bill Melcher ~ Daily Bull

Just when I thought it couldn't get any worse, it did. And then when I stopped caring what Chrysler did, they started designing a series of full size truck/SUV hybrids.

If you (the average, moderately intelligent person) were to build a hybrid from Dodge's arsenal of readily available vehicles, what would you do? Personally, I would take the smallest inline 4 cylinder available and pair it with an outsourced battery pack like every other automotive company has done. Add a continuously variable transmission for zest. That seems to be a recipe for success. The Prius, Insight and Fusion Hybrid all have decent sales to say the least.

Chrysler saw this success, turned tail and marched off in the exact opposite direction. After 40 days and 34 nights, Chrysler engineers came out of the closet -- er, meeting room. "We have a ...see Hybrid Hype on back

Sunshine's Sports Corner, or why Everything at Tech is Yager's Fault

Jeremy "Mr. Sunshine" Loucks ~ Daily Bull

Wow, what a crazy week of sports action. NFL upsets, MLB playoffs starting, and hockey is almost upon us! But first, a look at how our wonderful Tech Huskies have been doing.

This past week was Hobo Homecoming! While the pep band and fraternities were dressing as Hobos-Huskies school-spirited BS, our sports teams were dominating the competition. Tech football gave Ohio Dominican a rude welcome to Sherman field, destroying them 45-6 in front of a packed crowd. A few hours later, the hockey team decided to get in on the winning ways, pounding out a 5-3 victory over visiting Nipissing. The Nipissing goalie, Stone, was so bothered by our student section (led by a boisterous Scott Yager) that he let in 11 goals in his next game! Both wins were celebrated by everyone except those poor souls working at Dominos, as most of Saturday and all of Sunday pizza was half-off. In the ensuing chaos for cheap, delicious pizza, 4 nuns and an emo kid were trampled to death.

OH noes! Haha... get it... OH = Ohio)... NOT THE NUNS

In other news, Tech's women's Soccer team continues to play well, notching a 1-0 win over Lake Erie. Melanie Hoffman scored the lone goal and MaryBeth Spoehr got her fourth shutout of the season. Denied! With that win, the team improves to 5-5, which is damn good for a first-year club. Keep up the good work ladies! Finally, the second annual Alumni Broomball tournament was held, with the championship played right after the hockey game. Black Ice beat ...see Sportsmansheep on back

... Sportsmansheep from front. a powerful Moo Crew team, 1-0 in overtime. Black Ice was so good, they won even with the handicap that is Scott Yager's offensive skills.

On to the NFL, where a weekend full of crazy action happened. The Lions shot themselves in the feet with ridiculous penalties, scaring the bejeesus out of (but losing) to the Green Bay Packers, 28-26. Here's to hoping we beat the Rams next week to avoid the dreaded 0-5. The Vikings had a bye week, and the Bears finally lost after the lowly Giants laid the beatdown. Jacksonville surprised Indy 31-28, the Rams are a surprising 2-2 after beating the Seahawks, and Donovan McNabb showed he still kicks ass in Philly, beating his former team 17-12. My Jets are 3-1 and the class of the AFC East, having schooled all three divisional foes so far.

In baseball, the regular season has come to an end. In the AL, the Rays won the East when the Yanks choked. AL playoffs are Rangers at Rays and Yankees at Twins.

Out in the AAAA NL, the Giants edged the Padres and won the west, while the Braves squeaked into the playoffs. Reds at Phillies and Braves at the Giants are the matchups. One can only hope a meteor strikes Minnesota this week, as it would eliminate two very annoying teams. And if you are a Tigers fan, rejoice, as we went .500 this season (we didn't have a losing record!). And they just offered Brandon Inge a multi-year contract, so more ridiculous highlight plays are in the future.

In the NBA, weird injuries continue to abound as Carlos Boozer trips on a bag at his house and breaks his hand; he'll be out two months. Can't he just admit he was robbed and beaten? I mean, c'mon, the guy lives in Chicago now, it happens to everyone there sooner or later.

The NHL pre-season is finally over, so that means it's time for real hockey. Wings are predicted to finish in the top 3 of the West, owing to the fact that the StuckBlackhawks sold off most of their players. Also, Chris Osgood continues to suck. Let's hope that Jimmy Howard continues his awesome to make up for it. And finally, Mike Modano scores his first goal as a Red Wing. You go old guy!

Quick Notes: Texas drops out of NCAA football rankings for the first time since the stone age, Michigan State-Michigan game this upcoming week is gonna be insanely good, and nobody cares about NASCAR. 🐄

...Hybrid Hype from front

plan!" they exclaimed. "Well golly-gee, guys, that's wonderful! Put 'er into action so we can sell, sell, sell!"

said the executives and business-people.

Then the engineers explained their plan to the ever-slackening smiles of the stockholders, who in turn called the local

Edward-Jones office and proceeded to play hot potato with said stock. Here's the plan...

Step 1: Take one (1) 390 (390) horsepower Hemi V8

Step 2: Pair it with a used electric motor from a Dirt Devil.

Step 3: Insert in a Durango, an Aspen,

So eco friendly it SHITS rainbows and a Ram 1500. Step 4: Paint HYBRID all over it. Step 5: Lay off sales staff, you won't be needing them.

As a side note, the Chrysler Aspen was born a failure in 2007. But even to an average Joe, there seems to be a fundamental problem here. Hybrid trucks and SUVs defeat the very purpose of a hybrid from the get-go. They gain a paltry 4-6 miles per gallon over their normal, man-card-wielding counterparts because there isn't much to work with.

Chevrolet has been there and done that with the Tahoe Hybrid, and it was not a pleasant experience in the sales department. Smaller cars can see a gain closer to 20 mpg. And if the goal is to save gas, why does Step 1 involve the second biggest V8 Dodge could find? The main point here is that no-one has failed quite as hard as Chrysler at making a hybrid. They sat back and watched others probe the territory, and then proceeded down what was clearly the worst path. And for that, I hereby forfeit any shred of remaining respect I had for them, and give it to Cummins for being awesome, and for sticking with Dodge through these horrible times. 🐄
