2010 Olympic Renaming Games!

By Liz Fujita ~ Daily Bull

Well, Michigan Tech is at it again – changing the names of things ever so slightly to reflect some new message. First it was the great dorms-residence halls scandal of 2008. Then it was the CCLI-HDMZ civil insurrection that seized Walker over the last few years. Most recently, the Admin building has been given a new hat to wear: an ass-hat to be specific.

Tour guides for years have been explaining the importance of the Administration Building (Admin) for years. In that riot-proof fortress, you can give Tech your tuition money, use your money to buy a parking spot, register for expensive classes, beg for more money, and get helplessly lost. But over the summer, they revamped the inside to be all snazzy. "Of course, any time you renovate things, you have to give it a renovated name," ex-...see HAHA BUTT. on back

MTU Student Develops Intelligence-Dependent Invisibility Field

By Bryne Judy ~ Daily Bull

Over the course of human history, we have always wished as a species to disappear - from view, that is. From "that guy" blending into the crowd to the embarrassed school boy who just wants to melt away into the floorboards; from the up-and-coming thief to the com-soldier, al-everyone has desired at some point to hide their face from peeping eyes for one reason or another. What fortune, then, that this recent discovery has popped out of nowhere to take its place in history.

An artist's rendition of the device supposedly indicates a need for Gatorade to pass through the PVC. Tests are still being done, but with some difficulty since the volunteers can be hard to find.

John Shaunery, a 6th year Civil Engineering student at Michigan Tech, made the breakthrough just last weekend while trying to finish up an overdue and unrelated pipe planning project. Hit by brilliant inspiration, he reputedly fashioned the first prototype from tape, seven used staples, two pencils, a bottle of Gatorade, and a six-foot length of PVC pipe. The device, incredibly, renders anyone holding it invisible from anyone who happens to look at them for very long with only one flaw; it is unable to affect the unintelligent. Triumphant, John carried the advice to class the next day instead of the previous project, astounding both his professor and everyone else who became involved in the project.

"The device", commented the department chair, "is ingenious, really, in that it runs off some sort of unknown energy source in the Gatorade. It requires almost no energy outside the occasional replacement and is completely portable. John is a genius for coming up with this thing."

Shortly later, a parade of amazed students and faculty formed to show John's device's miraculous properties off which marched around campus for

... You can't see me from front several hours. Being a top-notch school, all students and faculty were completely unable to see the holder after learning the properties of the creation with the exception of a few inevitable bad eggs. Skeptics exist, but as all who have successfully witnessed the invisibility field in action would say, "anyone immune to the field is too simpleminded to matter".

Theories abound that the thing actually heightens the level of intelligence of those in the immediate vicinity; explanation of the complicated design alone is often enough to cause the listener to obtain a level of intelligence where it fades from view.

John has not been available for questioning, as five bulletproof black vans are said to have escorted him off campus shortly after his invention was publicized. 🐻

... HAHA BUTT. from front

plained third year tour guide Cody Marino. He clarified that "Administration" seemed a bit too general, so now the fortress of solitude is being marketed by its full and proper name: the Administration and Student Services Building.

Say it with me: ASS Building. Teehee.

Childlike insults to the higher-ups aside, there are a lot of reasons the new name is funny. The ASS retains all your money. The ASS gets blocked up with long lines of freshmen not understanding Banweb. The ASS gets spanked repeatedly by students who hate rising tuition prices. The ASS is tan and firm and gleams in the sun.

With all seriousness, though, I have to wonder why we haven't been calling it this all along. It says 'Administration and Student Services' right there on the side - always has. I guess even back in the 1800s people were gutter-minded enough to know they should call it Admin.

It occurs to me that maybe there's a more positive acronym for this building. What if we call it the Administration-Student Services Building, put in that little hyphen that can make a huge difference. It's joining the two functions of administrating and student services! The A-SS building. As a prefix, a- can mean "lack of" or "without." A-SS... without SS? Michigan Tech is a Nazi-free zone? Hooray!! I like that better. Much more hopeful.

In other renaming news, the "new residential apartment building" has finally been christened with a bottle of sparkling grape juice: Hillside Place. That sounds like either an old people's home or an insane asylum, doesn't it? The poor tour guides have a lot to remember, with so many things getting a fresh coat of paint, so to speak. I'm not sure if they have to walk all the way up the hill to Hillside Place; that would be quite a chore just to tell people it was named after the land it sits on. But hey, at least it's easier to spell than Multiliteracies Center. 🐻

What You Didn't Know About La Maison

By Weve Stittaker ~ Daily Bull

Known as the maggots, a fitting title for these tyrants, the La Masion hall has recently gotten flak over one of there hall rules, the No Fat Chicks one to be exact. The maggots are also know for their chant that has been banned on campus due to its vulgar nature.

What you didn't know is the many other nefarious things the Maggots have had there grubby hands in.

The maggots have been known to kick people's dogs, and not just any dogs: puppies. They go around from neighborhood to neighborhood abducting puppies and taking them to use for their own despicable purposes. They made their own sick soccer game were they use puppies instead of a ball. When the broken beaten puppy is done they just abduct another. Not only do they play twisted puppy soccer they also force the puppies to fight each other for scraps of meat and warm caresses.

Aside from their puppy slaughter, they have stolen candy from countless babies; they have teams devised and methods for doing so. One member distracts the mother or guardian while the other snatches the candy and gets out before anyone gets the wiser. What do the use this candy for you might ask? Well come Halloween, the Maggots recycle the stolen candy and pass it out with a few modifications. Suckers lined with shifty blades, cyanide-laced Reece's Cups, and Snickers bars filled not with nougat, caramel and peanuts... but with mayonnaise.

Witnesses have been quoted saying that the maggots are involved in identity fraud. One claims to have had her social security information stolen and then sold to illegal immigrants. Another states that her credit card was stolen by a former maggot, who proceeded to charge over $9000 on it for internet pornography. When chargers were brought to the hall the only comment we could gather from them was, "What 9000!?" It should be noted that the charges have been dropped due to a lack of evidence, but with the maggots' reputation one could have their suspicions.

One wonders how such a sick group of individuals could exist, but the maggots never cease to amaze us with their terrible antics. If you find yourself face to face with a maggot remember to hide your kids, hide your wife, hold your purse and wallet tight, because when you least expect it the maggots will strike. 🐻
