SAF ACCOUNT AT -150K$, YET I'M OK ...and other USG News.

by John Pastore ~ Daily Bull

The big news is that the Undergraduate Student Government is running a deficit of six figures in its Student Activity Fee account. Money flows into this account from the SAF line item on every student's tuition bill. This SAF account now stands at -$153K.

The account which now processes student organization reimbursements is the "Subsidiary Allocation" which is funded for the whole year to the tune of $280K from the SAF. Similarly, the SBG's have their semester's $91K worth of funding. The Opportunities Fund has been powered up by some 20K$. University Traditions consumed another $58K, and Student Activities plots 51K$. All this, coupled with the SAF itself funded only $300K per se-

Unicorns Upset About Association With Gay Community

By Lunartic ~ Daily Bull

A curious phenomenon of the late 20th and early 21st century is the reassignment of certain cultural symbols. People have taken things with a symbolic meaning that has lasted for ages... and then completely flipped it around on whims for the sake of whimsy. Easter eggs harkened to witch hunts – the eggs were created by pagans celebrating spring equinox and when they were found, they had a witch to burn. Marriage rings were a down payment given to wives so that if the husband skipped town, she would have something to sell so that she could pay for whatever children he left her with. What we now know as a children's song "Ring Around the Rosy" was actually a mnemonic for the bubonic plague.

But until now none of those symbols have actually stood up for their traditional meaning. The unicorns are the first.

Robot Unicorn does not have sex. He's too busy ramming stars. He lets the factory reproduce for him.

"We are sick and tired of being seen as symbols of homosexuality!" said Peggy Sys. "That association is completely unfounded and goes starkly against who we are and have always been!"

The instances are not hard to find. There exists a news site called "Unicorn Booty" which caters to gay readers. Pretty much everyone who uses the Unicorn badge in the HALO games is seen as gay. And let's face it; you were probably thinking it just now. But why is this so?

Until this symbol-reassignment in the last few decades, unicorns were actually symbols of purity and innocence. They were vehemently anti-sexual, and they only ever appeared to virgin women. Their elusive beauty harkened to the beauty and grace of innocence.

And now, gay.

... Macro Micro? from front

mester has left the SAF account with a -$153K balance, and a predicted value of $55K come next spring. As I've been told, this isn't a problem - it will rectify itself come spring when the next SAF allocation triggers, it simplifies accounting, and is a common enough practice for various university accounts anyways. It just looks really bad right now.

Speaking of awkward financial matters, some student groups have received a letter from the USG which tries to explain that the invoices for services from on-campus departments ought to be paid up. To prevent such future letters, a new protocol for charging this kinda stuff has been invoked. One can still just pay the department directly, but if one would like one's SAF money to pay it, one'll need to:

- A: get the department to output an allocation sheet to the USG
- B: get the USG to confirm it, and

C: decide if you want an invoice you can pay at the cashier's office (as it was earlier) or if you want it automatically deducted from your groups allocation.

This will hopefully deal with the problem of people making dozens of photocopies while driving around spilling liquid nitrogen everywhere, and not paying for it.

A brilliant quote: I want either less corruption, or more of a chance to participate in it. If you'd like to be a member of this distinguished group of peopleoids, fret not if you're a freshman or a third year student: it's election season and there are 4 and 3 open positions respectively. Nominations open for the first years come the 7th and remain so for a week; direct queries to the USG desk or the president. The rest of you could show up and offer your opinions at meetings, and hope that someone vanishes into a corporate internship leaving a you-shaped hole. As a former freshman whiny-little-anarchist-bitch, I can state that getting involved in campus politics will be more effective than thinking how nice it'd be to live in a libertarian nightmare.

Regarding something totally free to student orgs, the clock/temp/advert Kiosk in front of the MUB may have some sort of modification conducted soon, to deal with the unsightly condensation. Anyone can request on behalf of a student organization a space in this kiosk to advertise whatever the hell kind of event they want for two weeks; Mary Ann in the MUB offices can help with that. If y'all don't fill it up soon, it may become tainted with the sickly sweet taste of mediated commercial advertising.

What follows are few more succinct things brought up at the meeting. PANK magazine is planning on publishing material soon enough. The Inter Christian Council is getting some kind of speaker for a Rozsa show. There's now a basketball club. The MUB Poster sale may be delayed due to the poster company's road crew suddenly quitting. MUB Board is planning an RSVPable-over-Involvement-Link tourney for Labor Day of that wonderful management game, golf. Travis Peirce is now, in addition to being Director of Housing, the Director of Student Activities. Finally, if you know who the next dean of engineering is, there is currently a search for that person planned from 10-11AM, in M&M 724. Nets and Man-catchers will be provided. 🐾

"This is an outrage!" cried Billy Manes, himself an influential unicorn. "This is nothing short of dumping brine into the purest of waters!"

This uproar has sparked another uproar, this one coming from the gay community itself. The unicorn movement for separation has caused such comments accusations as calling the unicorns homophobic and bigoted.

"That's not it at all!" said Sys, responding to the above concerns. "Our problem isn't that we're being associated with the homosexual identity, it's that we're being associated with sexuality of any sort!"

Sys enlightened our reporters on some issues of unicorn culture - they are all completely asexual and celibate. Some question whether or not they have sexual characteristics at all. They do not reproduce sexually - because eww - but instead are the sole remaining patrons of the Mr. Stork population service.

To disprove the myth that unicorns would be homophobic, Sys introduced us to her neighbors, a male-male loving couple. While some might call them gay, they prefer the term "homoromantic" (also used by non-unicorn asexuals) to describe their love. They do everything that every other couple does - they hold hooves in the park, go to the movies together and share candlelit dinners between cuddles - except for sex.

"We're just a species that doesn't like sex," said one of the couple. They indicated that they're actually very queer positive - as long as you don't do the naughty in bed with anyone at all ever - and accepting of everyone regardless of their gender, romantic, or sexual identities.

The unicorn population does have a single black sheep, however. His name is Bucky, who is bisexual and quite popular in gay bars. He's into horseplay and admitted to one of our reporters that he frequently used the healing power of his horn to cure STIs and remove hangovers. He's since been estranged from his family since they couldn't bear to be around a child so tainted by sex and debauchery. He's also the only unicorn to willingly carve his horn to resemble a phallus.

Question remains as to whether or not the unicorns will ever truly shake the association with gay culture. Sys has said that the two things are "both morally neutral, but culturally incompatible." Bucky, however, seems to be enjoying it. Other unicorns feel that the current stereotype is simply beating a dead horse.

Meanwhile, our co-reporter is absent on a brief - OH GOD, BUCKY! 🐾

Unicorns are misunderstood. This unicorn is deranged.
