Reminds me of my safari in Africa. Somebody forgot the corkscrew and for several days we had to live on nothing but food and water.

UP Weather Forecast Translations

By Sam Schall ~ Daily Bull

Greeting to all. We all know that the weather here in the UP can be a little odd, just like the students. But not to fear! Here is a good way to figure out what the weather is really going to be like when the weather man is 90% wrong.

"Partly cloudy and chance of rain?" Better break out those rain coats. It's going to be a wet one. Though it's not going to downpour all day, the weather is going to be overall nasty and gross with rain basically just hanging in the air, not moving. Keep your homework dry and you'll be good.

"Sunny but windy?" Stay clear of the wind tunnel. There is a special lost-and-found for hats and papers on this kind of day. The best advice is not to have anything loose and walk at a 60 degree angle with the ground into the wind (45 in the wind ...see Don'chya know? on back

United States Drops Non-Interventionism Policy to Join in Apple-Samsung War

By Kyle Roe ~ Daily Bull

The bloody struggle between Apple and Samsung has spread further around the world in the recent weeks. The companies have opened new campaign fronts against one another in Australia, the United Kingdom, Japan, and the US owned Jarvis Island. Now, Samsung is looking to preemptively strike against the Apple consumer base in North America that technically doesn't exist.

According to the new US Secretary of War, Steve Jobs, Samsung is looking to wage battle against Apple in any country using Apple products. "Just after the arrival of the iPhone 5 in Korea and other Asian countries, Samsung has been rumored to be moving its Western Fleet towards the United States; where it is obvious that Apple stores, and any civilians with i-Products, will be the target," reported Secretary Jobs. "Hopefully as long as Apple does not drop their bombs on Samsung mobile telecommunication stations in Africa, Samsung will avoid attacking American civilians."

After long delegation the United States government has hesitantly decided to ...see Media War on back

I believe both of their products would fence a good price at a pawn shop. Get it?

...see Don'chya know? on back

... Don'chya know? from front tunnel)... otherwise you'll be knocked flat on your butt.

"Cloudy?" Say bye to the sun for a week. It'll be chilly overall, mostly sweatshirts-and-sneakers days. Get yourself loaded up on vitamin D in other ways, because the sun isn't handing it out anymore.

"Rain?" That one is an understatement. Don't even bother trying to fight with an umbrella; it's going to break in a minute and you'll be soaked. Find the fastest and driest ways between classes and give yourself the entire 10 minutes between back-to-backs for running.

"Storm?" This is an overstatement (in most cases). It'll be the opposite of a storm, most likely a drizzle. Umbrellas will be safe here!

"Snow?" Nope. None. Nada.

"Sunny day in November?" Hello SNOW! Break out the shovels and the boots. Time to clear off the cars and slide down the hill from McNair. Just be careful not to hit 41 and we'll all be good and happy. ☺

... Media War from front

drop their policy of non-interventionism, also known as isolationism, in order to join Apple in the war against Samsung and the ANIMAGA (Anyone Not In Microsoft, Apple or Google Alliance). United States isolationism, the diplomatic policy where the US avoids alliances with other nations in order to stay out of wars not related to the direct defense of American people, has been a strong virtue in American foreign policy. "Our country has always avoided dealing with wars outside our borders, and has also taken great pride in not dealing with similar, unimportant problems domestically," stated President Obama at his War Declaration, "Now our country is finally faced with a threat worth fighting, and no matter the cost we will defeat every member of the ANIMAGA, for the protection of our country, it's ideals, and it's Anti-ANIMAGA citizens." Obama continued to state how the change of the country's foreign policy would lead to change for the better.

After the President's speech, Secretary of War Steve Jobs was given the stage to inform the public of the new, more rational and practical plan to deal with the Samsung and ANIMAGA threat. "The real threat is not Samsung's warships that are slowly moving across the Atlantic to our coasts, but the people living in your own neighborhoods that refuse to use Apple, Microsoft or Google products! Every member of our great country must realize that you are not American unless you are a Fruit, a Windowpane, or the number 1 followed by 100 zeros [10 ^ 100]!" Secretary Jobs received a roar of approval throughout his speech, which ended with Jobs instructing "every good Anti-ANIMAGA American to report any members of ANIMAGA or if needed, shoot them on sight."

Now in a state of war the United States is looking to draft all Apple, Microsoft, or Google using able bodied men to become "Finger Men" who will assist in the apprehension of all ANIMAGA members. If you know someone who does not use an Apple, Google, or Microsoft product and fear their lack of coolness is a threat, the government has set up the site my friend thinks he can be more cool by not using products that are popular.gov for reporting anyone who is not Anti-ANIMAGA. ☺

Now with 100% more white & nerdy!

Pluckin' the Strings

Cheers. Applause. Roses. Panties. With all of these things flying onto the stage, one would think this is a rock-concert or a comedy club. Nay, dear reader, they are at the Ontonagon Theater having just heard what could be described as musical orgasms for the ears. A man, a single talented man, went up on stage and did terrible, terrible, awesome things to a cello. For this performance: the thunderous applause, roses and occasional Victoria's Secret undergarment. Who is this man? This is Ben Sollee.

I had a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity. Did I get to interview Ben Sollee? Well, no. I got even better. I got to interview his cello.

Q: So, how long have you been with Mr. Sollee?

A: Oh, well, it's been about a lifetime for me. But I would say about 5 human years.

Q: How did you first meet?

A: Well, I was being used at a local orchestra quite harshly. One of the men there was very rough with me. Ben saw me perform and simply had to have me.

Q: So you guys hit it off right away?

A: Oh yeah. I don't know. He has magic fingers. He knows the right strings to pluck and the right fingering...and, well... um, could you excuse me for a minute?

Q: Not a problem at all. I can see that you really enjoy working with him.

A: Oh yes, he is a great artist and is very good at what he does. I am very lucky to have met him in my career. I owe everything to him, really I do.

Q: Now, I hear that there is a love triangle going on between you and his special bicycle.

A: I don't want to talk about that hussy. Always having him mount her. Although, she will take me along for the rides, which is very progressive.

By Ruben Garcia ~ Eternal Guest Writer

Q: Last question. How is it that you can take such a beating every night? Isn't it tiring?

A: Yes. In the end, I may get a little strung out, but Ben always takes care of me and he always knows what to do to make me move again.

Q: Thank you for your time.

A: Not a problem. You should come to the Ontonagon Theater for Performing Arts on September 29 to see what Ben and I can do. We only charge 10 dollars per student for my upkeep, as the show tends to take a lot out of me.

Well dear readers, I know where I am going. Hope to see you soon.

Until next time, Blue Leader out. ☺
