How to Get on Google Streetview (Part 2)

Nathan "Invincible" Miller

You may remember a few weeks ago I wrote an article about how to get on Google Streetview. I never intended to write a part 2 to the story, but it just so happens I was given another chance to get on a street level service... except it wasn't Google!

There I was, happily trotting home from the grocery store when out of the blue a wonky looking car drives by with what looks just like the Streetview mast sticking out of the roof. "That's no Streetview car!" my brain said, and it wasn't. Written on the side was "NAVTEQ," and the camera mast also had spinning bits all over it. Turns out NAVTEQ also has a street capture service, and they capture theirs in 3-D. The spinning objects were LIDAR units shooting lasers everywhere. Woo I'm ... see Streetside on back

Dr. Hawking also blames his miscalculation on the fact that he was too busy being way cooler than any of us to notice the irregular money flow. Face it, he's at least 20% cooler.

99% Actually 50% - Experts Forgot to Factor in Porn

by Kara Bakowski ~ Up N Coming Writer

Professor Stephen Hawking, the man responsible for calculating the "99%" statistic currently being used in Occupy Together demonstrations, announced that he discovered an error in his calculation.

"I forgot to include the money spent on porn each year," he lamented in a statement on Sunday. "When I made the calculation, there was a large sum of the average income that just disappeared, but I just assumed that it was eaten by taxes. In reality, the number is closer to 50% than 99%. With more than $200,000 being spent on porn every second, I don't know how I made this grave mistake."

"I think it's a necessity. I'd rank it above having healthy food for a week. How else will I get satisfaction in my life?" Landon Peterson, an Occupy Milwaukee participant, said.

Occupy Marquette participant Carter Kopach said that he never realized that he spent his money on porn. "I just entered my credit card number once, and every time I clicked on a video, I got charged. I thought it was just for verification purposes. I didn't know that I actually spent money on this. I thought that all of my money was spent on food, but apparently not. Those websites should just tell you upfront that they will be charging you instead of having a 5-page terms of use thing that nobody is expected to read," he said.

In 2 weeks Wall Street will shower the protesters with nuclear waste. This will create the superhero team known as, THE 99 (Ninety Nine) And they fight for EQUALITY!

... Porn Power from front quette area accounts for the highest amount of money spent on porn in the age 18-22 demographic.

Protestors are furious about the miscalculation.

"I feel like a fool now. We've been getting arrested, all because nobody ever realized that the reason we live in such poor conditions is because we like to pretend that we have a sex life," Peterson said.

"I know that it's, like, really all our fault, but it's really not. That guy who did the calculation should have, you know, told us that watching porn isn't necessary," actress Paris Hilton said. "As a member of the 99%, I think that legal action should be taken to prevent errors like this from happening in the future."

This should, in a reasonable world, be enough to send the 99% back home from their campgrounds. However, they still seem to be taking over parks and public facilities around the nation in what is now viewed as stubborn resistance akin to that of republican politicians. Government officials and the police are incredulous at the response to the error, or lack thereof.

They say that "the 99% has made a mistake, and they should own up to it."

"We won't leave," an anonymous Occupy Together organizer said. "Until every American has a say in every decision this country makes, we will continue to make parks inaccessible to the public." ☺

Sharks Found in Michigan Golf Course.

by Jon 'Big-O' Mahan ~ Daily Bull

During the recent heavy rains in the lower peninsula, a local golf course suffered from an influx of unwelcome visitors: bull sharks. The locals are outraged by the supposed infingement.

"These sharks, man, they come into our state, kick our ass, and then leave. At least now the sharks are trapped. We'll get them!" said one golfer, who then proceeded to hit as many balls as he could at the water hazard. In accordance with the EPA, however, the golf course has to keep them there, and stock the lake every few days with fish.

"We don't really want to help the buggers, but, you know, regulations are regulations, and they are living animals," said the owner, who's begun to figure out a way to make money by letting people see the surprisingly friendly sharks... they just not pet or put anything in the water of course.

Experts are now trying to figure out how long the sharks will stay. "Well, we're not sure quite how long, but we're expecting them to be here over the winter, and leave sometime in May or so. They always seem to do that anyway..." No word on how they'll get out of the water hazard as of yet, as it is currently landlocked. "Detroit is going to have some problems trying to get these sharks outta here. They are stubborn little bastards.... But at least we sell more steaks now. Cooked rare too!" More on this certainly strange story as it develops.

Now this one here.... He's named Li'l Antti. He's just a ferocious li'l guy ain't he! You aint gettin yer ball with him around.

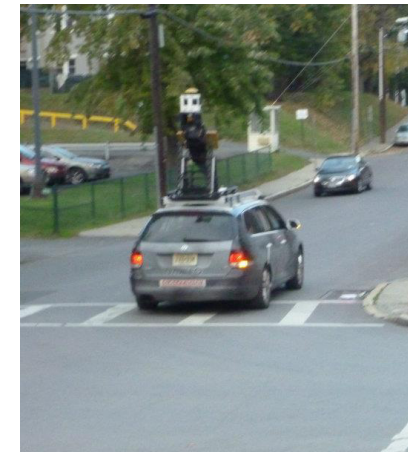

... Streetside from front three dimensions!!

Remembering my own teachings, I played it cool and merely gave it a passing glance or two until after it passed me by. Then I scrambled and got my camera out for a halfway decent shot. Remember, the key is to not let them on to you; otherwise they'll scrub you out for sure. And ALWAYS remember to carry your camera with you!

I wasn't previously aware that NAVTEQ existed, but now that I do, I'll have to keep checking back to see if they release their imagery through Bing Maps.

Bing calls it "Streetside," and so far there are no images at all in the Albany area. NAVTEQ hasn't gotten to Houghton yet either, so there's still hope for everyone else!

And now that I've gone and made a Part 2, I might as well do up a Part 3 for next time: How to Get on Google Earth. I've done it, so STAY TUNED! ☺

Looks more like a creeper car than anything...
