Showering with children deemed legal, Penn State Coach Rejoices

By Alex Dinsmoor ~ Daily Bull

In a sudden and surprise decision by the 14th appeals court of mid Pennsylvania, showering with children has become a legal activity after the recent scandal at Penn State University. The case was brought about by Joe Paterno, relating his involvement with Jerry Sandusky's activities. After a record setting short procedure, the court determined that although creepy, showering with a child is no different than showering with a significant other. Joe Paterno was a key figure in the case.

players before and after games. Getting clean together is a great way to celebrate!"

Testimony like this and from players of the Penn State football team convinced the court that although showering with others can be creepy at times, it in no way is illegal. Testimony from a former quarterback for Penn State who wished to remain unnamed also shed light towards the normality of the situation.

"It wasn't out of the ordinary for coach to get in the showers with us after a big game. It's how we celebrated at Penn State, by taking close, intimate showers with each other!"

"My long standing policy with incidents like this is that showering can and should be done with two individuals no matter the age. Showering is an activity that can and should be enjoyed with as many individuals as possible in order to get the "full experience" of the shower. That's why I often would shower with my

With such testimony, the court had no option but to see that Sandusky was just "celebrating" at all times! Cases brought up by

by Kara Bakowski ~ Daily Bull

The famed Walker swimming pool has resurfaced after the recent snow. After its closure in the 80s, it has become nothing but a story to tell freshmen that likely won't believe it anyways.

However, students and faculty of all degrees and ages were shocked last Wednesday, when a pool appeared in the snow in place of the sidewalk in front of Walker.

"I was so confused. I thought that the pool used to be by the vending machines, not in front of the building," a faculty member said. "Unfortunately, it isn't deep enough for swimming yet, but hopefully as we get more snow, we'll see a positive improvement."

Students have mixed opinions on the new pool. While most are happy that they may no longer have to walk up to the SDC to get a workout, others are not so thrilled. "All of my classes are in Walker. It's so hard to get in and out of the building now, between the packs of smokers and the people who just stand there in awe because there's a puddle of water on the sidewalk."

"This sucks. I have to walk through the pool to get from DHH to Wads for meals on weekends. My feet are soaked, and it's just not fair. They should, like, put the pool somewhere else. Like in the basement," an ignorant freshman girl said. She also voiced a reasonable complaint about DHH's lack of food on the weekend, and is contemplating suing the dining service for damages to her new Armani boots that were ruined by the pool.

Knowledgeable school administrators have stated that the pool may be a seasonable facility. Some predict that it will be gone by the summer, to return next November. "Due to budget cuts, we won't be able to afford to keep the pool running year-round. As a result, we will only keep it operational during the winter months, when water is cheapest and most readily available," an administrator said yesterday.

Meanwhile, the pool will remain closed for the same budgetary reasons until the snow longer melts. It should be fully functional by December. 🐾

Paterno were such things as getting an influx of new members to Sandusky's charity (the more the merrier!) or getting access to more gym bathrooms (it's nice to have a change of scenery once in a while). One cannot blame Sandusky for wanting to shower with children, since it is them who made his charity so successful. The court agreed with the viewpoint by stating that showering with children is perfectly legal. The judge delivered the opinion with the noted opinion:

"Based on the facts delivered by former Penn State players, coaches, and various teenagers we as a court cannot realistically be upset over a person's cleanliness activities regarding minors. Staying clean is a necessary activity and if that may involve children, then so be it. Although this is all really creepy in the eyes of the justice system, we cannot interfere with a long standing tradition of Penn State."

When we tried to reach Sandusky for comment, he was too busy showering to get back to us. 🐾
