FICSIT Corp. to Sponsor MTU Career Fair

DJ Benjamin

The prestigious Fortune -500 Company, FICSIT Corporation, has announced that it will be sponsoring upcoming Career Fairs at colleges and universities around the country, including at Michigan Technological University. FICSIT is known for designing end-to-end solutions for manufacturing, logistical, security, and power distribution equipment to help automate entire supply chains, including mining, refinement, and transportation technologies. They are also in the midst of launching their Space Colony Organization and Operation Program, or SCOOP, for the colonization and development of alien planets.

Despite their Massive-megacorporation reach and status, FICSIT claims they do not have the name-brand recognition that they need in order to fill their staffing requirements. With such a diverse operating portfolio, FICSIT is hiring for just about every role, from “soft” skill positions like PR, hiring, and project managers, HR, propaganda minister, accounting, etc, as well as technical positions like graphic designers, engineers of almost every flavor, research specialists and programmers. Certain position listings are particularly eye-catching, such as: “Environmental Exploitation Engineer– Develop systems for efficiently exploiting every type of natural resource for a given environment, including developing processes for efficiently converting any living matter into energy. Position open for Environmental Engineers,

Mechanical Engineers, and Agricultural Scientists”; “AI Engineer— develop an advanced AI system for monitoring and improving efficiency in resource use, as well as guiding employees to FICSIT success. Position open to applicants with Computer Science, Software Engineering, Electrical Engineering, Mechanical Engineering, Biomedical Engineering, and ‘I’ve used ChatGPT once’ backgrounds”; and “Space Pioneer– For those interested in boldly going where no one has gone before”. Establish basic infrastructure for resource extraction and manufacturing. Position open to applicants of any background, with preference given to those with a pulse. Must be willing to relocate.”

With FICSIT expecting to hire thousands of employees within the next few years, and projecting to have at least 500 working resources available by 2030, many are very excited to see them at Career Fairs. They may be easily spotted by their characteristic orange branding, and might– just might– be handing out “Awesome Tickets” that you can exchange for a cool mug. Maybe even a statue of a nut if you’re really ambitious.

HONK THE BRIDGE! HONK THE BRIDGE! HONK THE BRIDGE!

Peppy Pepster

Eagled eyed viewers may have noticed that every morning you can't see shit. Specifically you can't see shit across the Portage. Every morning Hancock seems to disappear and is replaced by THE FOG. Unfortunately these occurrences are only going to get more common.

Every September the annual Parade of Nations traverses from downtown Hancock to the Dee Stadium in Houghton. During which the Huskie Pep Band performs the bonding ritual by chanting "HONK THE BRIDGE! HONK THE BRIDGE! HONK THE BRIDGE!" followed by the bridge blaring its maritime emergency horn. This tradition is not only fun but strengthens the connection between Hancock & the rest of the Upper Upper Peninsula to Houghton. Without this bond the Upper Keweenaw Peninsula could go the way of the Edmund Fitzgerald and disappear into Lake Superior.

But following the closure of Finlandia University the parade this year started at the Rozsa Center, continued downtown then looped back to the Dee. The pepsters tried their best chanting and shouting from the Ambassador Restaurant but the Lift Bridge did not recognize them and refused to blare its horn, which is reserved only for maritime emergencies and the Huskies Pep Band. The "musicians" wept and wailed mid parade claiming "THIS GAME'S RIGGED! THIS GAME'S RIGGED! THIS GAME'S RIGGED!" For they knew what horrors were about to be unleashed. But the pep must go on and arm waivers commanded their decibel shattering force to play "No Beer" as a way to give the onlookers some peace. There's no telling long until Lake Superior rises to claim Hancock but in the meantime locals can strengthen the bond by visiting Hancock and the rest of the Keweenaw Peninsula and checking out the wonderful tourist spots.
